1215 – 1315 hrs
Urban Service Ecosystem in Indian Cities
Rise and progress of India’s Smart Cities Mission has caught global attention with already undergoing projects worth USD 20.30 Billion. There is a growing demand for cities to optimize urban services management, provide better and more efficient infrastructures and services often at less cost. As Information systems have become prevalent in urban environments, they have created opportunities to provide intelligent services within related areas of urban ecosystem. Cities leverage these technological advancements to provide public services through digital forms. At the same time, social inclusiveness should be an integral component of the proposed Smart Cities Mission. The Session aims to deliberate on the adoption of newer technologies and services, Challenges in execution of projects and the policy intervention required for better urban service ecosystem in the country.
